

FURMAN WESLEY FELLOWSHIP

The Furman Wesley Fellowship is a thriving community. The outreach to the freshmen this fall proved to be extremely fruitful. These new freshmen have outstanding leadership skills; they've already assimilated to the community, and will be a major asset to the future of Wesley at Furman. The group continues in their mission work over semester breaks with a majority of the group participating. What has been accomplished with this group is what most ministers hope for in a group. They are self-sufficient. The group has leadership in place that plans and implements the programs of the group. In addition, every student is part of one of these leadership teams having ownership of the ministry. For example, a senior who helps lead the worship team realized that almost the whole team was graduating this year, so he took it upon himself to gather in a few freshmen and offer weekly lessons helping secure a music team for the fall. These kinds of stories abound with this fantastic group of young adults. Any church would be blessed to have one of these students as a member and leader in their congregation. The group is currently in a time of transition with campus ministers. The desire is that by conference the search committee will have found a full time replacement for the Reverend Jo Anna Fallaw who is now serving Francis Marion University. This will be the first time that Furman Wesley Fellowship will have had a full time campus minister. Praise God for the growth of the program and the Conference's willingness to support this change.
